Summer Greens Shakshuka

with Smoked Paprika Yoghurt

20-30min

2 Portions

Here's a unique take on an Israeli egg favourite, normally made using tomato, capsicum and hot spices. Bursting with green goodness (and, yay, made in one pan), our non-spicy version will suit all ages and palates. You'll be amazed at how little time it takes to get ready, from go to whoa.

What we send

- Greek-style yoghurt ⁷
- asparagus
- smoked paprika

Bring a medium deep frypan of salted water to the boil for the vegetables. Trim the asparagus, then cut into 3cm lengths. Trim the snow peas (see cooking tip), then cut into 3cm lengths. Crush or finely chop the garlic. Finely chop the onion. Rinse the chickpeas and drain well.

Stir the spinach through the vegetables to combine. Using the back of a large spoon, make 2 indentations in the vegetable mixture. Carefully crack an egg into each indentation.

Cook the asparagus and snow peas in the pan of boiling water for 1 min. Add the peas and cook for a further 1 min or until the vegetables are tender. Drain then refresh under cold water. Wipe the pan dry.

Cover the pan, then cook the shashuka for 3 mins or until the eggs are just set. While the eggs are cooking, put 1 tsp smoked paprika (the remaining smoked paprika won't be used in this dish), 2 tsp water and the yoghurt in a small bowl, season with salt and stir to combine.

Heat 1 tbs vegetable oil in the frypan over medium heat. Cook the onion and garlic, stirring often, for 5 mins or until softened. Add the green vegetables and chickpeas, season well with salt and pepper and stir to combine. Add the spinach, cover and cook for 1 min or until the spinach wilts.

Divide the summer greens shakshuka among bowls. Drizzle with the smoked paprika yoghurt and scatter over the sesame seeds to serve.
